

*yes, the strong are strong in their weakness as the weak...weak, out of sheer strength, the strongest can hardly move;
the wise becomes amazed...speechless.*

*all this is logical as correct as $1 + 1$ is two because everything is the result of its opposite and, therefore, it is also true that how stronger somebody develops a drive - the more attractive it becomes,
to overthrow yourself in your contrariness.*

the most masculine man - is also the most woman at the same time and so it seems absurd, so the weak becomes the strongest and the so-called strong, then becomes then the most miserable.

*the circle closes.
yes, everything...and also we have our time, because even the donkey-tongues of thistle are hanging*

but until then we dance on a rope and the abyss which opens us is ourselves we are stumbling... we fall into the depth of ourselves into or through us... how could we learn to connect the beginning with the ending, the end with new beginnings?

of course we are - the strongest, losing our individuality but in the end we will be the winners of ourselves.

so don't be afraid, for it is only the look of your beauty which fades away - but not life - that is enormous forever one must understand and be obsessed with it.

we live on the crave for separation and can therefore bestow only love - as death comes in and says:

he is with me - yet I love...

you .-